OptiMobile and Brightpoint announce distribution partnership regarding WBX UniPhone in Qtek dual-mode smartphones.

OptiMobile AB and Brightpoint Sweden AB today announce that they have entered into a partnership under which Brightpoint will distribute OptiMobile's client software WBX UniPhone in existing and coming dual-mode Qtek smartphones.

With WBX UniPhone for mobile devices such as the family of dual-mode GSM/WLAN Qtek smartphones, all telephony services are completely integrated in one client. It relieves users from issues regarding selections and differences between cellular and WLAN networks for voice telephony. Any call at any time is seamlessly routed over the most optimal carrier available, regardless whether it is over the cellular network (GSM), corporate WiFi network (VoIP over WLAN) or other available WiFi networks such as home based WLAN access points or hotspots. New user behaviour is not required.

Under the distribution agreement with OptiMobile, Brightpoint will distribute WBX UniPhone in existing and coming Qtek devices with GSM and WLAN radio interfaces. "Brightpoint is a leading distributor of Qtek devices and has an established international distribution organization. We believe that Brightpoint is a partner of choice to meet the rapidly increasing demand for UniPhone enabled Qtek devices" says Lars Edman, CEO of OptiMobile AB.

Lars Altergård, Business Area Manager at Brightpoint Sweden AB continues; "The market for VoWLAN opens for new business opportunities. With a strong exciting and upcoming range of dual mode devices, Brightpoint sees this as a milestone for onsite to off site convergence".
